
THOMAS SINCLAIR, Purdue University
Robinson forcing in C^ -algebras*

Several long-standing open problems in the theory of C^* -algebras reduce to whether for a given class of C^* -algebras there is a locally universal one among them with certain nice properties. I will discuss how techniques from model theory, in particular model-theoretical forcing, can be used to shed light on these problems. This is joint work with Isaac Goldbring.